STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

The provisions of law relating to banking companies at present form a subsidiary portion of the general law applicable to companies and are contained in Part XA of the Indian Companies Act, 1913. These provisions, which were first introduced in 1936 and which have undergone two subsequent modifications, have proved inadequate and difficult to administer Moreover while the primary objective of Companies Law is to safeguard the interest of the stock-holder, that of banking legislation should be the protection of the interests of the depositor. It has therefore been felt for some time that separate legislation was necessary for the regulation of banking in India. This need has become the more insistent on account of the considerable development that has taken place in recent years in banking, especially the rapid growth of banking resources and of the number of banks and branches. The enactment of a separate and more detailed Act has in consequence now become imperative. Regard must also be had to the fact that the banking system is likely in the post-war period to be more vulnerable by reason of the great expansion, both quantitatively and relatively, that has taken place in demand deposits, as compared with time deposits, during the war years

2. The provisions of Part XA of the Indian Companies Act, which part will now be repealed, are incorporated in the Bill with certain modifications and the addition of several new provisions designed to safeguard the interests of depositors and to ensure the development of banking in India on sound lines The main features of the Bill are as follows —

(1) A simple definition of banking with the object of limiting the scope of the legislation to institutions in which the funds are deposited primarily to ensure their safety and ready withdrawability;
